History:

Shtandart was designed by the Tsar himself and he also took part in building the ship. She was built in just five months being started on 24 March and completed on 2 August 1703. For the first years of her life Peter the Great was also her captain. Shtandart was the flagship of the new Russian navy, taking part in the War of the North by defending St Petersburg and seeing duty until 1719. After this she was brought to St Petersburg to be kept forever, according to Peter's orders, as a monument to the art of Russian shipbuilding.

On 17 September 1728, considering the poor state of the ship, Catherine I ordered Shtandart to be repaired but this proving impossible she made a second decree: "Peter the Great had ordered the ship to be preserved forever, so in his memory we must make a new one."

On 4 November 1994 the keel of the replica was laid down near the River Neva in Saint-Petersburg. Six years of hard work in all seasons followed. The team rapidly becoming professional, used the same materials and methods as on the original ship. She is built of the materials nature has provided to hand: oak timber, iron bolts, larch planking from a forest planted on the orders of Peter himself. Shtandart is decorated with extensive carvings, at the stern, round the gunports and at the break of the poop. A prancing lion figurehead breaks the waves and the royal standard of Peter the Great, with its double eagle and charts of the four Russian seas, flies from the masthead.

4 September 1999 replica of frigate Shtandart was launched. Her maiden voyage began on 24 June 2000 from St. Petersburg. Since Tsar Peter wished to encourage links with other countries, and also to learn more about technologies of the day, especially shipbuilding, he has traveled to Europe on a "Great Embassy". The mission of the frigate Shtandart's maiden voyage was to be the Great Embassy of our times.

Since year 2000 Shtandart has passed more than 35000 nautical miles and has visited more than 150 ports in 11 countries of Europe. Now she is the most famous sea-going replica ship. Shtandart took part in many sail festivals: Sail Amsterdam 2000, Brest 2000 and 2004, Douarnenez 2000 and 2004, Sail Bremerhaven 2000 and 2005, Cutty Sark Tall Ship Races 2001, 2004 and 2005, Baltic Sail 2001, 2002, 2003 and 2004, etc.

Shtandart is a real working ship, welcoming as trainees young men and women from all countries to sail (crew of the ship consists of young people aged 15–25), experiencing the life of XVIII century frigate and developing traditional skills, self-reliance and personal values. We are recruiting young, adventurous people from all round the world to build ships and sail them across the seas. Shtandart invites guests to feel an atmosphere of the real sea, wind and sails.
